Infrastructure refers to a CLD resource room or activity space, while CLD facilities can be interpreted as CLD-related digital resources such as data platforms, websites and resource hubs which provide youth with information on self-understanding, multiple pathways and various opportunity structures to facilitate their CLD journeys.

An Example of Good Practice - The agency/service unit has a set of systematic, youth-centric and sustainable CLD policies rooted in CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks, which should be regularly reviewed and shared with various stakeholders for their feedback on strengthening youth's CLD competencies, CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks, which should be regularly reviewed and shared with various stakeholders for their feedback on strengthening youth's CLD competencies, CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks, which should be regularly reviewed and shared with various stakeholders for their feedback on strengthening youth's CLD competencies, CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks, which should be regularly reviewed and shared with various stakeholders for their feedback on strengthening youth's CLD competencies, CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks, which should be regularly reviewed and shared with various stakeholders for their feedback on strengthening youth's CLD competencies, CLAP@IC's key principles and intervention frameworks include:

- L Adoption of CLAPB/IC's Youth Development and Intervention Framework (YDF) in agency s/s/ervice unit's CLD policy, especially the following four pillars of intervention: Engagement, Self-undenstanding, Career and Pathway Exploration and Career Planning and Management;
- ii. Adoption of Strength-based approach: Break through the traditional deflicit-oriented crisis intervention approach focusing on one's incapability and personal weaknesses in the agency's /service unit's CLD policy;
- iii. Adoption of youth-centric intervention into agency's/service unit's policy: Bring in youth voice and respect individual differences and informed decisions;
- iv. Incorporation of the Expanded Notion of Work (ENOW): Redefine successes and talents in the agency s/service unit's CLD policy to achieve a paradigm shift, taking account of both paid and unpaid work experiences, stressing the importance of personal meaning in their achievements and recognising one's values, attitudes, skills and knowledge (VASC) acquired in their experiences to be treated as one's talents;

Glossan

- 1. The CLD leading team/leader may be the service head, service supervisor, service leader and unit-in-charge of an agency. The composition/responsible person may vary across agencies.
- 2. The CLD team may consist of the CLD leading team/leader, designated CLD workers, frontline NEY service workers, administrative support staff and IT/media coordinators. The actual composition may vary across agencies.
- 3. Distributed leadership in the CID context broadly refers to the adoption of the whole-agency approach in which the leadership density lessened from the 'power centre', CID leading team/leader and senior management level such as the director and service head in particular, and spreads towards other professional teams within the agency. This approach type is particularly useful in breaking down silo among different teams when implementing CID-related initiatives, through the effective management, leadership and coordinating of the CID leading team/leader.
- 4. Internal stakeholders: Refer to NEY, parents and agency workers
- 5. Ecosystem-based Navigation-oriented Career and Ufe Development (CLD) Competencies Framework is the guiding principle of CLAP@IC Community Intervention strategies. Youth service practitioners are expected to incorporate the four core elements, which are Engagement, Self-Understanding, Career & Pathway Exploration and Pathway Engagement, into the design and delivery of CLD services and solicit support from different stakeholders to maximise the resources, opportunities and networks accessible to the service users. The ultimate goal is to create a youth-enabling environment where youth are equipped with the competencies to sustain their meaningful engagement with the world of work.
- 6. Core competencies related to CLD practitioners may consist of:
 - i. Ethical and professional behaviour: Recognise the importance of ethical principles in working with NEY, reflect on personal values and exercise social work's core values and behaviours in case management
 - ii. Social diversity: Recognise the cultural, social and racial characteristics of NEY
 - iii. Meaningful engagement: Understand the challenges and success factors for meaningful engagement with NEY and implement effective approaches for co-creating meaningful engagement with NEY
 - iv. Navigation in opportunity structures: Acquire competence in the use of web-based platforms to navigate the ecosystem and opportunity structures to enhance navigation skills of NEY
 - v. Family collaboration: Explore the family context of NEY, conduct family assessment and offer family engagement to activate NEY and their families along the career and life journey
 - vi. Community partnership: Facilitate the connection between NEY and stakeholders using different intervention strategies and tools to deliver quality support to NEY
 vii. Supportive measures and social policies: Understand and critically examine existing supportive measures and social policies that can help NEY integrate into the labour market
 - viii. Evidence-based practice: Use evidence-based practices, design data monitoring plans and management systems, and translate research evidence to improve practices and policies
 - ix. Career and life perspective: Acquire knowledge and skills of CLD theories, models, intervention strategies and tools and incorporate the career and life perspective into NEY services
- x. School-community connection: Coordinate with existing or potential stakeholders, school partners in particular, to foster a strong school-community connection (e.g. setting a referral mechanism) by enhancing the information exchange and exploring cooperation opportunities from different aspects. This is to ensure that the CLD needs of school dropouts and youth at high risk of dropping out of school can be fully supported when needed.

Criterion 3.3 Youth could make sense of the latest information of multiple pathways obtained from various platforms through a reflection on their needs, interests and abilities to make informed choices and act on their decisions.	 More than 70% of youth are successful in obtaining multiple pathways information to consider their educational and occupational choices after going through CLD intervention.

Glossary

1. Multiple pathways refer to the diverse options available for youth to pursue including but not limited to academic pathways, career pathways, leisure life, and Expanded Notion of Work (ENOW) experiences.

Benchmark 4	Address the Needs of Each Individual
Career and life development programm	es should be customised based on the needs of every youth, espe	cially the needs of Sp	ecial Target Groups, w	ith the consideration o	of diversity and equality throughout.
Benchmark Criteria	Agency Evaluation Questions	Emerging	Partially Achieved	Fully Achieved	Evidence to Support Judgement (e.g. documents, records)
Criterion 4.1 The agency/service unit should customise their CLD programmes according to the specific needs of Special Target Groups and should make respective adjustments or modifications according to youth's unique circumstances.	Does the agency/service unit formulate specific CLD plans for Special Target Groups (STGs) (e.g. young mothers, youth-at-risk, ethnic minority youth, institutionalised youth, hidden youth etc.)?
,	Does the agency/service unit provide personalised advice and support to STGs?
	 Does the agency provide debriefing after activities to challenge stereotypical thinking and foster an enabling CLD environment for STGs?
Criterion 4.2 The agency/service unit should facilitate youth to discover their interests and needs towards making informed choices and empower them to transform to action.	2. Does the agency/service unit provide CID exploration programmes (including individual assessment) and CID tools which inspire youth to identify their needs, interests, and strengths for making informed choices?
Criterion 4.3 The agency/service unit should provide CLD tools and materials to support youth to explore CLD journey according to their interests and needs.	 Does the agency/service unit provide youth with CLD tools for self-reflection (e.g. strengths, interests, VASX) and building their profiles (e.g. CY360*, career roadmap) to plan and manage their life journeys?

Benchmark 5	Youth Engagement and Co-creation

	4. Does the agency/service unit fulfil either one of the conditions below?
	a) Is there any document to record youth's initiatives/ideas and action plans on CLD programmes?
	 b) Is there any channel for youth to inform the agency/service units of their wishes and needs to co-create programmes (e.g. through developing communication channels, allocating human resources for follow-ups, documenting youth's ideas)?
	c) Does the agency/service unit respond to youth's wishes and needs on CLD programmes?

- Glossary

 1. An effective mechanism should include 2 main aims:
- a) to ascertain a youth-adult partnership
- b) to maintain bottom-up participation
- 2. Youth refers to the individuals who participate in the CLD services in the agency/service unit and /or who participate in the experimental group of CLAP@JC's beneficiaries for CLAP@JC Resources NGOs and Network NGOs.
- 3. Supportive measures refer to those provided by the agency/service unit to youth and/or social workers such as the creation of time and space, capacity building and access to resources and networks, allowing youth to explore, connect, and co-create with adults (social workers). Facilitating youth to apply for the Youth-led Funding Scheme to actualise their career and life goals, as well as developing communication platforms/channels between youth and the agency/service unit's personnel/other adults/peers, could be some good examples.

An Example of Good Practice

- Level 1 "Know"- Youth are informed of the mechanism through which they can provide ideas on co-creating the programmes.
- Level 2 "Ideate" -Youth are invited to participate in the ideation of the CLD programmes, give suggestions and express their preferences.
- Level 3 "Participate" Youth are invited to take part as tutors/guests in the implementation of CLD services, e.g. leading a game.
- Level 4 "Execute and Co-create"- Youth participate in the ideation, resource allocation, programme design and launching process of CLD services.
